Soutache Braid Brilliantly Colored to Match or Contrast With Shade of Gown Made Into Belt Ornaments and Various Other Ways of Trimming—Especially Effective on Serge Suits, Velvets and Velours—Silver Gold Laces Used in Combination With Fur—Fur and Soutache Used Together—The Science of Spending Money a Much Needed One.

Passmenterie shows no signs of any decreasing popularity, and laces are worn more and more, especially the Italian laces, of which the Milanese design is the most favored. Whole gowns are made now from this same Milanese lace with the threads of a wonderful cobwebby fineness, and the gowns copied from the choice old museum pieces found on mummies and in tombs of ancients of thousands of years ago.

Silver and gold laces are used more and more in combination with fur, as also is the soutache braid. Fur and soutache, both of them dyed the same shade, make effective trimming for afternoon frocks of serge and broadcloths.

Soutache is even brought into play on some of the latest muffs shown here. It peeps out from the folds of velvet and fur, a mere glimpse of it, and yet sufficient to make itself felt.

A MUCH NEEDED SCIENCE.

Shall the modern schoolgirl add the management of money to her already full curriculum?

The question seems worth consideration, in the light of the recent pronouncement of a legal expert on this vexed problem.

Hitherto, only dress allowance has been the item reckoned for in the schoolgirl's expenditure, but with increased extension of her independence, and opening up of wider fields of activity, there is much ground for endorsing the suggestion that the modern girl should be made responsible for every item of expense in her daily life.

Many a hard-working professional man would learn to appreciate the training in money values acquired by a young wife ere she assumes the post of head of a household.

The experiment in qualifying in the science of spending and a practical knowledge of domestic economy from the point of view of the purse, would seem to be well worth trying.

SALT LAKE WINS ITS WATER SUIT

Salt Lake Dec. 25.—One of the most valuable Christmas presents ever received by Salt Lake City was presented to it yesterday by Judge C. W. Morse, presiding judge of the Third district court, in the form of a decision in the famous water case of the Progress company against Salt Lake City, by which the city gains an additional supply of water amounting to about 4,500,000 gallons daily during the entire winter season when its supply is shortest. The city won practically everything it has contended for in years past.

The case is regarded as one of the most noted water controversies that has ever been handled in the courts of Utah. It had its inception at the time the Cottonwood conduit was built by the city about eight years ago. Immediately there arose a dispute as to division and distribution of the waters of Big Cottonwood stream.

The case was fought in the courts for years and finally a decision was rendered by Judge Morse in which he made a distribution of the summer waters for power, irrigation and other purposes. At the time, however, he announced that because of the lack of measurements of the winter flow, and insufficiency of evidence as to what waters were available in the winter, or nonirrigation season, he was unable to make a decision distributing and settling rights to the winter flow. The court instructed the court commissioner to take careful measurements of the flow during the winter season of 1912-1913. These records were reported to the court early this year and during the past summer all parties interested were given an opportunity to present evidence in support of their claims for portions of this flow.

It is upon this evidence and in regard to issues raised in this phase of the suit that the latest decision is based. The present decision applies only to winter waters of the stream used for domestic purposes. All disputes as to irrigation and other waters of the nonwinter flow have been settled previously, and the present decision apparently settles all disputes, so far as Salt Lake is interested.

BECOMINGLY DRAPED.

A Grecian tunic of white satin with a straight rather full skirt is here used for a foundation with a shawl shaped drape of pale violet velvet, caught with pink roses.

At the left side a beaded girdle shows and filling this space between this girdle and the drape is cream lace, slightly draped. A cape of the lace covers the shoulders and head-banding is used as a trimming.

Salt Lake, Dec. 25.—Edward O'Hara of Pocatello, Idaho, a brakeman for the Oregon Short Line, was brought into Salt Lake yesterday morning and taken to the L. D. S. hospital, suffering from a broken leg. O'Hara received the injury Tuesday night at Humphrey, Idaho, on the Montana division when in alighting from the caboose of his freight train he slipped on the slippery ground.

ENJOYABLE EVENING AT THE M. E. CHURCH

Under the direction of Mrs. Malone and Mrs. Hamer, the Christmas eve celebration at the First M. E. church was carried out in a most pleasing way.

After the large crowd had been seated, King Christmas entered and took his seat on a white throne in the middle of the platform. He was arrayed in an elaborate costume of the Elizabethan era and several pages carried his long red ermine train as he entered the royal court room. The throne was handsomely decorated with gold and silver tinsel and other ornaments. The royal secretary, gowned in a green costume, next entered and beside him walked his ink bottle. He told the king that the people were eager for a return of the old loving spirit of Christmas giving.

In answer, his royal highness ordered the gifts to parade before him that he might judge what gifts should be given in his kingdom. Then all but a few footlights were turned out and the gifts marched in. Almost every conceivable class of Christmas gift was represented in the procession and as they passed by the king in the glow of the footlights they made a novel and pleasing sight.

Following the procession came the moral aimed at by the phantasy. The gifts were called in one by one by the king and examined by him and the Spirit of Christmas, as to their fitness to be gifts in the kingdom of love. All the useful things were commended, but Miss X-pensive Toy and a poorly dressed doll given because the giver had nothing else to do with it, were ordered from the kingdom.

A number of songs sung under the direction of Mrs. McClure, were given as an introduction to the program and were appreciated.

HARBERTSON HAS KETONEN WITH HIM

Jack Harbertson has taken Waino Keeton into his training camp to put the finishing touches to his preparations for the difficult feat he expects to perform next Monday night at the Orpheum theatre, when he will be pitted against Tom Long and Arthur Chester. Keeton, whose ability is too well known to the fans to need comment, is putting him wise to several new tricks, which he will use to good advantage.

Tom Long, who has spent the past few days in Denver, will go to Boulder tomorrow night to wrestle a local man, as he thinks a bout or two will give him the best kind of training for the Monday night match in Ogden. Chester has been in the best of condition for several weeks and is on edge for a round with Harbertson. Chester and Long each expect to take up the whole ninety minutes with Harbertson and Harbertson has equal confidence in his ability to dispose of both men in that length of time. With all three wrestlers in that frame of mind and in fine physical condition the fans are sure to get a big run for their money.

POULTRY SHOWS IN THE STATE

Five poultry shows will follow each other in rapid succession throughout the state, commencing next week. The first will be the exhibition of the Salt Lake County Poultry association, which will begin at Murray next Monday and last all week.

Next in the series will be the annual show and competition of the Utah Poultry association, an organization of Salt Lake fanciers. This one will be held from January 12 to 17. At the same time the Utah Poultry association will exhibit at Provo, and then comes the Ogden Poultry association at Ogden, commencing January 19 and closing January 24.

The final and biggest show of the series will be that of the Utah State Poultry association in Logan. At this will be exhibited poultry from every part of the state. Owing to the few conflicts in dates between the shows the series is expected to prove very successful.

LONE ROBBER HOLDS UP DRUG STORE

Salt Lake, Dec. 25.—His features masked by a red silk handkerchief, a lone robber, armed with a revolver, held up the Irvine drug store, 756 South Main street, shortly before 10 o'clock last night. Mrs. Etta B. Irvine and her little daughter were in the store. Covering them with his weapon, the robber commanded both to remain quiet unless they wished to be killed. The child ran out of the store and to a neighbor's where she telephoned for the police.

In the meantime, the holdup rifled the cash register taking from it $2 or $3 in change. Without attempting further search for valuables he hurried out and ran. The police auto, carrying Chauffeur Walter Griffin and Patrolmen Woodard, Willie and Conyers, drove up a few minutes later, but the robber had disappeared.

Simplicity in Higher Life.

The higher we rise the simpler we become. There is a childhood into which we have to grow, just as there is a childhood which we must leave behind; a childishness which is the highest gain of humanity, and a childishness from which but few of those who are counted the wisest among men have freed themselves in their imagined progress towards the reality of things.—Geo. MacDonald.

Queer Translations.

When the Bible was translated into Japanese, an equivalent to the word "baptize" could not be found, and the word "soak" had to be used instead, so that the Japanese Biblical students are acquainted with a person named "John the Soaker," and with a doctrine of "soaking for remission of sins." In that case the ministrations is due to inadequacy of language. A school boy once rendered "Miserere, Domine" into "Oh, heart-broken schoolmaster!" And another recovered from German the text "The spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak," in the form, "The ghost of course, is ready, but the meat is feeble."
